ANZAC SPECIAL

32 FASHION AT WAR: NEW ZEALAND STYLE IN WORLD WAR II

Vicky Garrington, research curator at Wigram's Air Force Museum of New Zealand explains that dressing fashionably was not seen as a frivolous pastime during the war. In fact, it was felt by many to be a patriotic duty, while "letting yourself go" was seen as defeatist and unpatriotic.

MUSEUMS

36 NAVY MUSEUM AND HISTORIC SITE ARE JOINING FORCES

After a quarter of a century in temporary accommodation, staff and volunteers of the Royal New Zealand Navy Museum are getting excited about the prospect of a new home for the museum's treasures. By Rose Evans, Barbara Cassin and Erika Currie.

RARE BREEDS

46 BEARDIES – A DROVERS’ BEST MATE

“When I look at photos of New Zealand’s early stockmen and drovers, I always notice the number of beardie sheepdogs being used. Nearly half of every drover’s pack seemed to be beardies.” Ross Nollie explains.

OTHER FEATURES

10 THE FOUR MILES – a family’s passion for rural history

Tony Russell follows the Miles family around their North Canterbury farm on something of a mini-safari as they talk about their unique collection of vintage machinery.

14 TAKING THE WATERS - MARUIA STYLE

Erika Currie follows the more than 100-year old Maruia Springs colourful path from primitive bathing hut for men, neglect, financial ruin and fire to sought-after, modern spa resort with a Japanese flavour.

44 THE BLUE BUGATTI

A “blue bug” caught the editor’s attention during the three-day 2009 Steam & Vintage Country Festival at the Glenbrook Vintage Railway in February. The car turns out to be a survivor from the pioneering days of motor racing in New Zealand: a Bugatti Type 35A, No. 4540 and built in 1925, raced by Ken Hemus at Ohakea in 1950, and purchased by motor racing legend Ron Roycroft in 1952.

49 OTAKI RAILWAY STATION STRUGGLING TO SURVIVE

Once the wooden building hummed with activity. It was full of hustle and bustle, and alive with purpose as a principal gateway for goods and people in and out of the small rural town, and a major link with the outside world. By Vivienne Bailey
